

WHAT'S THE RELEVANCE OF SIBOS TO THE INNOVATION TAKING PLACE IN THE INDUSTRY?

SIBOS 2016, Geneva Switzerland
September 27, 2016

Scott Coey, EMEA Head of Broker-Dealer Services, BNY Mellon
Michael Cole-Fontayn, EMEA Chairman, BNY Mellon
Dominic Broom, Global Head of Trade Sales, Treasury Services
Doug Shulman, Global Head of Client Service Delivery, BNY Mellon
Samir Pandiri, Global Chief Executive Officer, Asset Servicing
Alan Verschoyle-King, Global Head of Sales and Relationship Management, Treasury Services
Mike Bellacosa, Head of Global Payments, Treasury Services

Scott Coey: Sibos is very important to BNY Mellon. It's very important for our clients as well. It's really the place where the banking and the finance industry meet the technology and the innovators of tomorrow. And where we see things like blockchain adapt and change, and how we can take those developments and how the bank can pass on that information as well.

Michael Cole-Fontayn: Sibos is all about innovation, because this is where the infrastructure of the payments systems and capital markets is really debated. The relationship between technology providers, solutions providers, banks, investment managers all comes together in an ecosystem that is expressed in one word: Sibos.

Dominic Broom: After a number of years of focus on regulation, it's refreshing that innovation, where the industry is heading, where we're investing for the future, is the top of everybody's agenda here at Sibos. And key to that I think is the blockchain applications across various parts of the industry, both payments and trade finance.

Doug Shulman: We sit in the center of the financial market ecosystem, and at Sibos, we have partners. We have clients. We have technology companies all coming together to talk about how do we collaborate better together? How do we connect better together? How do we exchange data better together? So, it's a great place to talk about innovation.

Samir Pandiri: Innovation is an enormous opportunity for us to do things differently, more efficiently and deliver a better client experience. I think it's a topic that's front and center that a lot of our clients are talking about here at Sibos.

Alan Verschoyle-King: I think Sibos is as relevant today to innovation as it was 20 years ago. The great thing about Sibos is it takes us all out of our normal comfort zone where we're in with clients selling. Here, we're with clients. We're with partners. We're with technology companies. And we can have a truly strategic dialogue around how we can work together and innovate together.

Mike Bellacosa: I think SWIFT has always been a very innovative community. They have Innotribe, and how we look to really, really look to drive innovation around. But I think, more recently, the SWIFT GPI initiative has been really exciting in terms of driving payment initiatives and innovation. It's really going to help the community in terms of providing good solutions for our clients.
