INVESTED IN IDEAS: Upcoming Conference on Emerging Technologies to Feature BNY Mellon Treasury Services Panelist

As part of our continued efforts to lead and participate in industry discussions around emerging technologies that are set to impact the global payments arena, Cheryl Gurz, Managing Director and Emerging Payment Technology Segment Manager for BNY Mellon Treasury Services, will participate in the upcoming conference on Digital Currencies + The Blockchain, presented by American Banker on Tuesday, July 28, 2015 in New York City, NY.

Cheryl will join a panel discussion with several industry leaders on Future Applications for Blockchain & Bitcoin 2.0 from 11:15 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. The session will cover the role these new technologies may have in meeting the growing demands for industry payment systems to become faster and more transparent while lowering costs.

In her role as a payment strategist and thought leader identifying industry trends and their potential impact on BNY Mellon's global payments business, Cheryl investigates emerging payment technologies and open distributed ledgers, such as the Blockchain, to determine their potential for growth and use within Treasury Services. She is an active industry conference speaker, appearing at multiple SWIFT, BAFT and AFP events.

According to Cheryl, "BNY Mellon is actively exploring a future where new ways to handle payments will be fueled by the technologies introduced to us through these types of digital currency technology discussions. It is an exciting time to be engaged in this dialog and helping to drive a paradigm shift for our industry over the next decade."
