MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

Dear Clients and Friends,

2015 was a challenging year for the global markets. Despite this, BNY Mellon continued its efforts to support the Depositary Receipt (DR) markets and make them an even more impactful tool for issuers and investors. As the leading depositary bank¹, BNY Mellon was at the forefront of many initiatives designed to add value to our clients.

Social Finance is at the core of BNY Mellon’s business strategy. During 2015, we became the first depositary to provide detailed data and insights to help clients understand the Environmental, Social and Governance factors that are reshaping global investment strategies.

BNY Mellon has also acted as depositary for clients raising funds in 2015 in the pharmaceutical and healthcare sectors. 2015 saw 23 companies, from these sectors, raise $5.7 billion in DR form.² Such transactions can be used to broaden their investor base and increase funding for research and development, which in turn can improve lives.

To ensure that we target areas that are important and relevant to clients, and where we can drive positive change, BNY Mellon is focused on corporate social responsibility. Our approach to corporate social responsibility has evolved beyond our already strong employee engagement, environmental stewardship and community commitments. Now, to complement BNY Mellon’s role in global capital markets, we’re invested more than ever — invested in our people, invested in market integrity and invested in the world.

We look forward to putting these principals — and our knowledge and expertise — to work in 2016 to help DR issuers and their investors build a market that will benefit all.

DRs AS A CONDUIT FOR INVESTMENT IN THE PHARMACEUTICAL AND HEALTHCARE SECTORS

An active area of U.S. investor interest recently has been the Pharmaceutical and Healthcare sectors. Seeing this trend in the industry, BNY Mellon’s DR Division is focused on the specific needs of the DR issuers as they seek to improve lives through investment in research and development.

In 2015, 23 companies from these sectors raised more than $5.7 billion in DR form, reflecting the relevance of DRs as a tool to access capital for these sectors.

ENVIRONMENTAL, SOCIAL AND GOVERNANCE (ESG) FACTORS

Significant global environmental and social factors have gained recognition as issues that can present risks and opportunities for issuers and investors. These factors are considered in ESG risk analyses that are used by certain professional investors.

As the leader in depositary receipts, BNY Mellon is proud to be the first depositary in the industry to make available to clients a wide range of ESG data and insight specifically designed to help them understand the implications of these developments, as well as provide them with a roadmap to effectively factor these into their overall strategy.

Example: Only invest in companies that are actively addressing labor and human rights concerns in their supply chain.
Example: Do not invest in utilities that rely heavily on fossil fuels.
Example: Consider companies that have beneficial records in all areas of concern, such as human rights, climate change and business ethics.

Natural resource constraints, global health threats, social instability and demographic changes are already presenting business leaders with challenges and are shaping decisions that will affect future business success and investment performance. These realities have been recognized and have resulted in policy shifts, for example, in some large U.S. and non-U.S. public investment funds.
RESHAPING THE GLOBAL INVESTMENT LANDSCAPE

Momentum is growing both from investors and companies to more carefully consider the implications of ESG factors. The number of institutional investor signatories participating in the United Nations-backed Principles for Responsible Investment Initiative (PRI) — an international network of investors dedicated to advancing responsible investment practices — grew by 19% in 2014 and included more than 1,300 signatories representing over $45 trillion in assets under management.

IDENTIFYING TRENDS IN ESG DISCLOSURE TO PROVIDE ACTIONABLE INSIGHTS

In line with our efforts to assist and advance the debate around ESG issues, BNY Mellon Depositary Receipts is collaborating with the Newton Centre for Endowment Asset Management at the University of Cambridge in an exciting project studying the financial market’s evolving view of the materiality of nonfinancial information such as ESG.

This independent study conducted by the University of Cambridge also has the support of other organizations such as the CFA Institute, the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) and PRI.

The study is surveying three groups, Corporate Issuers, Asset Managers and Asset Owners, to identify possible gaps between information currently provided by corporate issuers and investors’ expectations.

In 2016, we intend to launch high-level findings of the research that may provide insights for our issuer clients on how to enhance their disclosure of nonfinancial information.

The long-term intent of this University of Cambridge project is to provide information useful to all market participants and promote market dialogue regarding ESG, another demonstration of our commitment to providing value to our issuer clients.

2016 Outlook
GLOBAL MARKETS OUTLOOK

Outlook 2016: Increasing Divergence May Yield Opportunity*

BNY Mellon Investment Management believes that great minds don’t always think alike, especially when it comes to the challenging business of looking into the future. We asked specialists from several of BNY Mellon’s investment boutiques what investors may expect from financial markets in 2016.

What is your outlook for 2016 and what assumptions do you base it on?

Peter Hensman, global strategist at Newton: “I expect a challenging year for risk assets as nominal growth rates remain subdued and market volatility rises. Those conditions will increase the need for selectivity in stock selection with a focus on sectors and companies that have balance sheet flexibility and the ability to reduce their costs bases.”

Chris Barris, global head of high yield at Alcentra: “The U.S. will experience modest economic growth, slightly above 2% and consumer spending will drive much of that growth. We expect oil prices to remain around U.S.$50 per barrel and the dollar to remain roughly at its current exchange rate with the euro.”

Todd Wakefield, portfolio manager with The Boston Company: “I don’t expect an economic recession, though we may have a corporate profit recession. I expect increased government spending to help the U.S. grow by around 2%, while corporate profits stay flat and the Fed starts to move off its zero interest rate policy. I expect stimulus programs in China to produce a soft landing there.”

Sinead Colton, head of investment strategy at Mellon Capital: “We expect continued U.S. growth. In Europe, we expect ongoing expansionary policy from the ECB and a weaker euro to produce stronger growth in the Eurozone. In Asia, we expect further stimulus from the Bank of Japan, a continued slowing in Chinese growth, and ongoing challenges for emerging markets.”

Rebecca Braeu, director of sovereign research at Standish: “We expect global growth to pick up from 3.1% to 3.3%. U.S. growth will be led by consumer spending and investment in housing. European Central Bank policy will support growth in Europe, while growth in China will continue to slow moving into next year.

* This Q&A was excerpted from the 2016 BNY Mellon Markets Outlook. For the link to the full publication and disclaimer please refer to page 31 of this brochure.
Cliff Corso, North America CEO of Insight Investment: “U.S. output remains below its potential, and we expect growth in 2016. That said, corporate debt levels have become worrying and we will continue to watch them. We expect several Fed rate hikes, moderately higher rates across the curve, and tighter corporate spreads. We also expect the dollar to strengthen moderately, Europe to accelerate, and China to slow in a well-managed, controlled fashion. These conditions should be positive for risk assets, though there will continue to be bouts of volatility.”

What is your outlook for the asset class that you specialize in?

Hensman: “I expect a challenging equity environment, and expect risk to underperform in fixed income.”

Barris: “For 2016, we expect mid single digit returns in the U.S. and Euro HY markets, though commodity pricing could drive major variances from that target. For loans, we are anticipating a similar return profile but with less volatility.”

Wakefield: “I expect small cap equity returns to be below the historical average. Earnings estimates are too high and profit margins have peaked.”

Colton: “For equities, we are currently positive on core Eurozone and Japan, and are negative on the U.K. We are moderately positive about selective developed government bond markets, but are mindful of central bank policy actions.”

Braeu: “We expect the structural slowdown in China and across Asia and easing on the part of the ECB and Japan to create a strong backdrop for fixed income. In the U.S., gradual rate hikes and a continuing decent-sized economic expansion will continue to support spreads.”

Corso: “We expect corporate bond spreads to tighten as is the norm in hiking cycles. Given rising leverage at corporations, we find the protection of asset-backed securities attractive. We expect rates to rise in a manageable fashion.”
