

INVESTED IN BRIDGING THE INFRASTRUCTURE GAP

BNY Mellon Corporate Trust
September 2015

Infrastructure for the World, Project Finance Administration by BNY Mellon

Recovering economies. Urban expansion. Growing populations and aging infrastructure. These global trends are creating powerful demand for infrastructure and energy investments around the world.

Take transportation. Repairing the world's roads, bridges, seaports and airports is a multi-trillion-dollar job. Canada alone will need to invest 200 billion dollars in infrastructure over the next 10 years, while the EU will need almost 1 trillion Euros over the next 3 years<sup>1</sup>. And that's nothing compared to the United States, which will require 3.6 trillion dollars to bring its crumbling infrastructure up to standard.<sup>2</sup>

We've also seen growing interest in new energy investments, as people's concerns about burning fossil fuels rise, regulation increases, and easily-tapped natural resources dwindle. But with only 11% of the world's energy currently coming from renewable sources, we've still got a long way to go.*

And then there's social and civic infrastructure. Aging populations in developed economies are driving the need for more hospitals and healthcare facilities, while exploding youth populations in emerging markets mean there's a renewed need for investment in schools.

With so many projects to fund, many entities are turning an eye to project financing and public/private partnership (or P3s.) Not only are these great ways for sponsors to bridge the funding gap, they can be attractive investment opportunities for lenders.

At BNY Mellon Corporate Trust, we help make these projects a reality. We offer comprehensive third party loan and bond administration solutions to project sponsors and lenders alike, and that means we're supporting everything from wind farms in Texas to rapid transit in Ontario, from fiber optics in Peru to thermal power in Ghana and toll roads in the Philippines. At every step of the way, BNY Mellon is committed to helping you minimize your operational risk and to maximize the value of your project, to you, and to the global community.

BNY Mellon. Invested in you.
