ETF MISCONCEPTIONS

Rob Rushe, ETF Executive, EMEA Asset Servicing
August 2018

So one of the main misconceptions in the ETF space is that ETFs are actually a separate asset class to mutual funds. In reality, ETFs are mutual funds that just use a different distribution technology to mutual funds. And it’s important for asset managers to realize that all they need to do is embrace that technology to help get them access to a new type of investors in the market.